

Energy Industry Veteran Joins Energy Edge Consulting

Ron Dictor Brings over 25 Years of Energy Industry Experience to Firm

Houston, TX (PRWeb) May 8, 2013 -- Energy Edge Consulting, a leading provider of energy management and advisory services, has added Ron Dictor to its team of energy professionals. Mr. Dictor has an extremely broad background in many areas of energy including automotive emissions research at General Motors and a variety of positions at Amoco (later BP) ranging from natural gas research to business development for the pipeline company. Most recently, Dictor has sold electric power to large commercial and industrial customers across the U.S. for GDF Suez Energy Resources, NA. Before selling power, Dictor worked six years procuring electric power, natural gas, coal and fuel oil for a major U.S. and Canadian paper manufacturer.

Mr. Dictor will continue to grow Energy Edge's current client base of companies and organizations spanning a wide range of industries including manufacturing, chemical processing, telecommunications, commercial real estate, restaurants, and government institutions. He will be located in Chicago, IL.

"We're very excited about the addition of Ron to the Energy Edge Team," said Brian Walker, President of Energy Edge Consulting. "We believe Ron's most recent experiences in both buying and selling energy gives him a unique perspective that will be of great value to our customers."

"I knew of Energy Edge's work while I was in sales with GDF Suez," said Ron Dictor. "They have an excellent reputation in the industry for fairness and thoroughness. I'm excited to join the team and help them further that reputation, grow the business, and deliver great value to clients across the U.S. and Canada."

Prior to joining Energy Edge Consulting, Ron worked in the automotive, pulp & paper, petroleum and power & gas industries. He received his PhD in Chemical Engineering at the University of California at Berkeley and both his B.S. and M.S. in Chemical Engineering from MIT.
